What the Prevouched badge means

IT ASSERTS

This team was independently vetted against Prevouched's five-pillar standard: Technical, Past work, References, Communication, Security & process, and currently holds the status and tier shown.

IT DOES NOT ASSERT

That Prevouched performs, guarantees, or insures the team's work, or that the team is US-based. It's a verified standard met, not a promise of outcomes and not a nationality.

What “revocable” means, and why it matters

Most trust badges are permanent stickers: earned (or bought) once, displayed forever. Prevouched marks are living statuses. If a team's quality slips, a client complaint stands, or re-attestation fails, the mark can be suspended or revoked, and the change shows immediately on the verification page. A mark that can be lost is a mark worth trusting.

How to verify any badge

Click any Prevouched badge, or go to [prevouched.com/verify/\[id\]](https://prevouched.com/verify/[id]). The live page shows:

- Current status: Verified / Suspended / Revoked
- Tier: Verified / Backed / Managed
- Vetting date and scope
- A link to the team's directory profile

If a team is suspended or revoked, the page says so plainly. If a badge doesn't link to a live page, treat it as unverified.

Why you can trust the vouch

Prevouched is paid by the teams it vets, but it never sits between a team and its client: payment for the work flows directly between you and the team. Prevouched's only stake is the integrity of its own standard, which is why the mark is documented, revocable, and live. The incentive is to be right, not to be lenient.
